

Broadcast frequencies are owned by the public, not by corporate broadcasting entities. Sinclair will be in direct violation of FCC regulations if it preempts regular programming and requires its TV stations around the country to air a blatantly political program aimed at criticizing a candidate running for office. The FCC should not only order them to desist but should fine the Sinclair Group for its current attempt as well as other recent and past violations of regulations. The FCC should not turn its head and ignore such politically motivated, biased programming.
